One Sunny Morning a beautiful black baby was born. Her family thought she should have a unique name and a spectacular name to match the glimmering sparkle in her eyes. Her name was Chambers. R. Grant and she was born Sept 21 1970.

10 years later she had her first day of 4th grade when the kids started teasing her about her name. They said things like "Isnot Chambers a boy name?" They also said "You sound stupid" and "Why would your mom name you that?" These words hurt her really bad and she would cry home almost every day.

Her mom or brothers did not get it only her sister and dad could calm her down know <sup>one</sup> knew why.

"It's O.K. baby take a breath" said her dad as he hoped they would stop soon. Her older sister would play board games and tell her great tales of wonderful leaders.

All Chambers would think is how she wanted to be one of them one of these days.

Every morning she still had to go to school even though she begged her mom not to make her go she still had to her mom would tell her "fight back" but ever time she tried she would get teased even more. One day she went to a play audition she had to sing in front of the hall lower school. Amber was first the mean girl she had done this before so it was a breeze for her. She was great which made Chambers more nervous yet she still said "good job all the other girl said "move it lower" that made her scared to go on she was the last person when she sang a grin came on every body's face including Ambers. Then she heard the wisper going around "Wow she really good" Amber got jeloss.

When

every body left her music teacher miss. Abdool asked her if she ever thought of being a singer. right then Chambers face lit up. For 2 years Chambers studied the art of sing 1.0 years later when she was 22 she got accepted to a whight university and though she was teased she is the first blak person to be accepted in a whight school and she was so famos she now has her own street Chambers Street. The End
