Weeks 1-3:

Develop a clear work plan with your mentor. Determine when/where you will meet. Be prepared for each meeting. You should expect to spend 1-2 hours each week working on your project.

Weeks 4-6:

Meetings with your mentor are shifting to what you are learning about your project topic and about yourself as a learner. As you move deeper into the project, you are developing some perspective on the work that has been done and the work that remains to be done. You are beginning to think about what needs to be done to tie your work, research, and experience together in its final form.

Weeks 7-9:

The bulk of your inquiry work should be completed and you are now shifting your focus to think about how best to tell the story of your work. Your meetings with your project mentor are focused on identifying a clear plan for when and how this work will be done.

Project Deliverables:

I have created a final blog update that synthesizes my process/learnings/reflections and includes my final product(s) (i.e., documents, images, video, websites, etc.), which my mentor has reviewed and approved.

I have created an 18"x24" digital poster that tells the story of my project and includes (if needed) QR codes to any relevant documents or media associated with my project. This poster has been reviewed and approved by my mentor. I have sent a copy of the poster pdf to Mark Silberberg.

I am continuing my project into the next trimester and have submitted a new proposal that identifies goals and benchmarks for the new work I will do.
